

Katy Korkos Biography

Katy has lived in White Rock since 1983, when she moved from California in order to open a restaurant. Katy has always been a maker of things, including food, and has pursued many different forms of artmaking, from drawing and collage through bookbinding, quilting and embroidery. She has shown her work locally (at Fuller Lodge Art Center and the gallery at Mesa Public Library), regionally (in the South Broadway Cultural Center, Jemez Views Gallery, the Las Cruces Fine Arts Museum, the Governor's Gallery, Johnsons of Madrid Gallery and Thirteen Moons Gallery) and nationally (Houston International Quilt Festival and Pacific International Quilt Festival). She has had work published in Fiberarts Design Book 6, in Quilting Arts magazine and the Quilting Arts Book. She retired in 2019 from a career that encompassed food service, journalism, library programs and now is a full-time studio artist.
